CHAPTER 1

General

1-1. Purpose.

This regulation prescribes a recommended process for planning cadet activities. It outlines the use of the Operations Plan/Order (OPLAN/OPORD), the Warning Order (WARNORDRD), the Fragmentary Order (FRAGORD) and when and how to use them.

1-2. Authority.

Section 509 of the California Military and Veterans Code directs that the Adjutant General develop training programs and curricula appropriate and necessary to conduct the California Cadet Corps training program.

1-3. General.

Training outside the classroom is a core component of the CA Cadet Corps curriculum. Units from battalion (school) through corps (state) level conduct activities that reinforce the objectives of the CA Cadet Corps (Leadership, Citizenship, Patriotism, Military Knowledge, Academic Excellence, and Health Fitness & Wellness).

Planning these activities is not just a requirement to have a good activity. Planning itself is a skill that we develop in cadet leaders, and is part of the CACC curriculum. Cadet leaders should be integrally involved in the planning process for every activity, and cadet leaders (commanders and staff members) should usually be any activity's primary planners with guidance from adult leaders.

CHAPTER 2 ACTIVITY PLANNING

2-1. Planning.

a. US Army Field Manual 5-0 defines planning as the process by which commanders (and the staff, if available) translate the commander's vision into a specific course of action for preparation and execution, focusing on the expected results. Put another way, planning is the art and science of understanding a situation, envisioning a desired future, and laying out an operational approach to achieve that future. Based on this understanding and operational approach, planning continues with the development of a fully synchronized operation plan or order that arranges potential actions in time, space, and purpose to guide the unit during execution.

b. Said more simply, the commander develops a vision for the activity, the staff comes up with a plan that will allow them to realize the vision, and they then execute the plan.

c. A vision in this context answers the question: What does the commander want to accomplish by the end of the activity? This vision is the most important aspect of planning an activity. The commander must express it, and the staff must fully understand it.

d. For example, we don't do a bivouac just to do a bivouac, or just to award the bivouac ribbon. We do it to conduct field training, to give cadet leaders leadership experiences in a field environment, to bring separate units from the brigade together, and to build cadet morale and esprit de corps.

e. Once the commander has adequately expressed his/her vision, the staff conducts a planning process that determines how they can accomplish the elements of the commander's vision.

2-2. Planning Fundamentals. US Army planning fundamentals are:

- Commanders focus planning
- Planning is continuous
- Planning is time sensitive
- Keep plans simple
- Build flexible plans
- Design bold plans

a. Commanders focus planning. Commanders must be involved in and provide oversight to the planning process. Planning starts with the commander's vision, and the end result is a plan for the activity approved by the commander. The staff figures out how to turn the commander's vision into a workable plan, but it is the commander's responsibility to see that the plan reflects his/her intent and to put the plan into operation.

b. Planning is continuous and cyclic. The operations process is Planning, Preparation, Execution, and Assessment. The commander and staff develop and publish their plan, then implement it. As the situation develops, they must make changes to the plan in order to make the activity successful. A plan rarely survives intact after an activity starts – that’s why activities are such a good leadership experience. The commander and staff are always somewhere in the cycle of planning, preparing, executing, and assessing – then planning once again.

c. Planning is time sensitive. The higher level the unit, the earlier a plan must be published. A battalion may be able to publish a plan a couple weeks before an activity. A brigade staff should have an OPORD for a weekend activity a month before the activity, and the 10th Corps should have their plan published two months prior to a major state level activity. That doesn’t mean that the planning process is done; but the staff moves into the preparation process, and planning starts at the lower levels with the information they get from the higher level plan.

d. Keep plans simple and build flexible plans. Don’t get mired in detail when you write a plan; the detail will change, and you’ll find yourself scrapping the plan because it doesn’t reflect reality. Put the major pieces in place, and only work the detail once you have all the information. For cadet activities, you rarely know who’s coming more than a week or two prior to the activity, and it always changes because cadets don’t show when they say they will (or you may allow replacements at the last minute). Don’t plan based on names – plan based on subordinate organization or teams and general numbers. Have a process worked out so you know how you’ll put in the details once you have them.

e. Design bold plans. One of the great things about the planning process is that it allows you to be creative. Don't just execute the same bivouac plan year after year. Envision new goals you want to accomplish, create dynamic new training that will inspire your participants, and actually plan a new activity. It's much more rewarding than doing the same thing time after time.

2.3 Cadet Activity Planning Process (CAPP).

a. The Army uses the Military Decision Making Process (MDMP) and Troop Leading Procedures (TLP) to conduct planning and prepare for operations. This works well for combat operations, but not so well for cadet activities. So we have our own process, the Cadet Activity Planning Process. The CAPP has eight steps. The steps are generally sequential, but some will overlap, as one step starts before you've finished the previous step, or different staff members do different tasks within the process. Step 5 has the staff doing parallel planning.

- Step 1: Envision the Activity
- Step 2: Initial Planning
- Step 3: WARNORDRD/Marketing/Staff Selection
- Step 4: Detailed Planning
- Step 5: Support Planning
- Step 6: Preparation
- Step 7: Execution
- Step 8: Assessment

b. The products of the planning process are the WARNORDRD, the Training Schedule, the OPOD, FRAGORDs as necessary, and the AAR.

2.4 Cadet Activity Planning Checklist.

The CAPP Checklist found in Appendix A is used by cadet staff to ensure they consider all appropriate aspects of the planning process. Not all items on the checklist will apply to every activity, but all should be considered.

2.5 Timing.

Timing plays a huge role in the success of the planning process. If you have a great plan, but it's not complete until the day before the activity, you likely fail. The Army uses the 1/3 2/3 rule – HQs uses 1/3 of the total time available to plan, and gives 2/3 of the time to subordinate units so they can plan and prepare. For an annual cadet activity like a bivouac or drill comp, you know when it's going to be, so you can start planning to give all echelons plenty of time to plan and prepare. Communications is important too. You can have a great plan, but if you don't disseminate it down the chain of command, you fail again. Everyone needs to see the plan and have time to plan and execute their part.

CHAPTER 3 PLANNING ORDERS

3-1. Planning Orders.

Planning Orders are the documents that outline the plan. The planning orders that we use in CACC are the WARNORD, occasionally the OPLAN, the OPORD, and FRAGORDs.

3-2. The Warning Order (WARNORD).

a. The Warning Order is the military equivalent to a Save the Date announcement. An example is found in Appendix B. The WARNORD gives you the format to put out as much information as you have early in the planning process. It is designed to give subordinate units (and individuals) key planning facts and assumptions so that they can conduct parallel planning, or can plan for the activity at their level. The WARNORD is not designed to contain all the information the OPORD will contain. The WARNORD allows students or subordinate schools to get school and parental permission in a timely manner, arrange for chaperones, recruit cadets to attend the activity, arrange for transportation, etc.

b. Minimum information to be contained in the WARNORDRD:

Type of Activity

Dates

Location

Requirements to Attend

Application Process

Events Planned if known

Cost

Whether transportation is provided

Whether meals are provided and cost

Staff Selection if planned

Key Suspense Dates

The format for a WARNORD is the OPLAN/OPORD format, using only the information you're initially putting out. In lieu of OPLAN or OPORD, type WARNORD in the heading. Appendix B shows an example of a WARNORD.

3-3. The Operations Plan/Order (OPLAN/OPORD).

a. The OPLAN is a document that completely plans a potential operation. In the military, a staff will develop an OPLAN for a type of operation, or operation in a location of concern (i.e. OPLAN for invasion of North Korea). CACC could produce OPLANs, but it's a lot of work and not really worth the effort. Examples would be a school having an OPLAN for annual bivouacs. The cadet staff would then use the OPLAN to base their planning process off of, and write an OPORD for the bivouac to be conducted in FEB 2019.

b. The OPORD This is a complete plan that contains all the planning details for an activity. Using the format in Appendix C, along with the CAPP Checklist in Appendix A is an acceptable process to use to plan an activity.

c. The OPORD has five paragraphs:

Situation
Mission
Execution
Sustainment
Command and Signal

3-4. The Fragmentary Order (FRAGORD).

FRAGORD is an order that puts in writing changes to the original plan (as issued in the OPORD). As changes occur, if they need to be disseminated, the command that issued the OPORD issues a FRAGORD. The FRAGORD only contains changes. It does not repeat the parts of the OPORD that have not changed.

3-5. Alternatives to Planning Orders.

a. Planning Orders are not the only way to disseminate information. Because of their military origin, they can be harder for civilians who aren't familiar with their format to understand. A Commandant, Brigade Advisor, or Cadet Commander may choose to use a simpler, more civilian format to put out information regarding an activity.

b. An appropriate format to use to disseminate information would be a Memorandum of Instruction (MOI) or a Circular, found in CR 1. As long as you present the information in a logical order, you may adjust these to fit your purpose.

c. No matter what format you use, you still need to use a logical planning process such as the CAPP to conduct your planning. In lieu of the products listed in the CAPP, you could call these documents enclosures to your MOI or Circular. It doesn't matter what they're called, or even their format. What matters is that you conduct the necessary planning, disseminate the information in a format the recipients understand, and have a plan that enables you to execute your activity.

3-6. Annexes.

a. Annexes will be used in CACC OPORDs, as necessary, to show planning details for functional areas. The format is shown in Appendix E. If an annex is not required, "not used" will be stated by the annex letter in the list of annexes at the end of the order. All annexes will be listed, whether used or not. Annexes will provide the information listed in the CAPP checklist, as necessary for the activity. If there is functional area information necessary for an activity that is not listed in the CAPP checklist, put that information in the annex after the listed information.

b. Annexes to be used are:

- A: Task Organization
- B: Command and Control
- C: Administration and Personnel
- D: Security and Safety
- E: Training and Operations
- F: Supply and Logistics
- G: Civic, Public, and Military Affairs
- H: Communications and Computers
- I: Any other needed subject area
